

Action Industries' Expert Engineers Develop Custom Solutions for Manufacturers' Garage Door Products

Custom Weatherseals, Fasteners, Hardware and Accessories

CLEVELAND, OH--(March 8, 2011) - With parts for garage doors becoming more difficult to find as a garage door gets older, Action Industries can design custom solutions for garage door products and their repair problems. The company's engineers design and develop custom parts that installers need for both repair and replacement projects.

Large manufacturers often change the tools and parts used to install new doors for both residential and commercial projects. Parts for older doors can be hard to find, making repair difficult. Action Industries can design and construct parts for most of the major garage door manufacturers' products, including both new and old garage door designs.

"We listen to our customers and try to bring new products to the line all the time," said Marc Calcaterra, vice president of operations, Action Industries. "Even if we don't offer a product today, we are designing and implementing new products monthly. Designing custom products for garage door repair is a competency Action Industries has that others don't offer."

Action Industries' engineers are experts in developing CAD drawings, prototypes, tooling and manufacturing custom parts to meet various specifications. Engineers can custom design weatherseals, fasteners, hardware and door accessories to solve issues with obsolete parts that manufacturers no longer produce.

Action Industries is establishing the market for custom-designed garage door parts, solving the problem of manufacturers who have discontinued production. The company provides full-service offerings so that installers can get all of their garage door materials in one place. Action Industries offers weatherseals, fasteners, brushes, garage door hardware and garage door accessories for all of the major manufacturers, saving customers time searching for parts from multiple vendors.

Engineers at Action Industries are knowledgeable on fixing numerous garage door installation, sealing and maintenance issues. Rather than speaking with a call center, installers and manufacturers who contact Action Industries work directly with our engineers to develop custom solutions.
